

Anne Meilof came to MCC in 2006 from Jacksonville, Florida, as the college's first Director of Institutional Research and Development. Before that, she held several positions in Jacksonville: program evaluator for the Girl Scouts; managing editor of Software Testing & Quality Engineering magazine; Web managing editor of StickyMinds.com; and grant proposal writer for Duval County Public Schools and Florida Community College. She also spent two years teaching university students in Chengdu, China, and Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

Anne graduated from the University of Minnesota with Bachelor's degrees in English and English Education. She attended graduate school in California, at the Monterey Institute of International Studies, where she studied international policy and Chinese, and graduated with a Master's of Public Administration.
